❤️ When Addiction Threatens Your Marriage

The numbers are heartbreaking: Over 46 million Americans struggle with substance use disorders. Behind those statistics are countless marriages strained by addiction's impact.

Substance abuse can:

- Destroy trust and intimacy
- Create financial instability
- Lead to emotional or physical abuse
- Impact parenting abilities
- Turn your home into an unsafe space

If addiction is affecting your marriage, remember:

- You're not alone in this struggle
- You can't force someone to get help
- It's okay to set boundaries
- Your safety (and your children's) comes first
- You deserve support too - seek counseling
- Al-Anon and similar groups can help

Whether you choose to stay and support recovery or leave to protect yourself, there's no shame in either path. Your wellbeing matters. 🌱

📄 Property 101: What's "Yours," What's "Mine," and What's "Ours"?

Quick refresher on property in marriage:

Personal Property (Yours/Mine):

- Items owned before marriage
- Inheritances in your name only
- Personal gifts given just to you
- Compensation for personal injuries

Marital Property (Ours):

- Income earned during marriage
- Homes/cars bought while married
- Joint bank accounts
- Retirement funds earned during marriage
- Business growth during marriage

Warning: Even "personal" property can become marital if you mix it with shared assets! 🗨️

☀️ PSA: You Don't Need a Resolution!

If you're going through divorce or healing from one, sometimes just getting through each day is enough. There's no rule that says January requires a total life makeover.

Skip the pressure. Skip the guilt. Your journey is yours alone, and moving forward - even in tiny steps - is already a win. 🙌

Be gentle with yourself. You're doing just fine. ❤️
